modern japanese pub

Sake is a beverage steeped in tradition that has been enjoyed in Japan for centuries. It is brewed, not distilled, from specially grown sake rice. Sake can be made from different types of rice, grown in different areas to give distinct flavors, similar to wine being made from different grapes from different regions. The general classifications of sake point to how much the rice is polished. The more the rice is polished, the finer the aromas and flavors will be.

Nigori-zake is 'Cloudy Sake'. Similar to a Muscat from France some of the yeast is left in the bottle creating a milky appearance.

Sake can be served slightly warmer in the winter with savory dishes, but Premium Sake is enjoyed best at cooler temperatures in small glass or ceramic cups. The tradition of dining with other people is to serve one another and always keep the glass full for it is considered impolite to let the glass empty. We invite you to select, sip and share this intriguing beverage with your friends.
